Why Uniforms?

- Mind over material: Students focus more on schoolwork while in class than what peers are wearing that day. Additionally, kids are less stressed about wearing the latest trends, or being out of the loop.
- Less disagreement between students and teachers: Educators don't have to spend as much time and attention focusing on what is appropriate attire. Parents also often say that it makes mornings easier.
- Fieldtrip safety: Clothing is appropriate for outdoor activities. Teachers are easily able to distinguish who belongs to the student body and who doesn't when in public, increasing school safety overall.
- Identity: students learn that their identity and creativity is not dependent on their clothing; it is inherent in who they are, the choices they make, and through creative thinking. Creativity is expressed through school projects.
- Cheaper than yearly wardrobes: Although the cost of uniforms can be expensive up front, the amount of money parents spend on fall and spring wardrobes each year for their children can be much more. School uniforms are intended to last and hold up to the stress of everyday wear.
- Sense of equality: Maybe the most important point– kids feel a sense of equality among their classmates. They can spend more time getting to know each other and about their unique backgrounds without the limitations of clothing choices.
